SIKES ACT PROGRAM Calendar years 2009 – 2010

Habitat Enhancement on Public Lands for Wildlife that are Fished, Hunted or Trapped

Prescribed Treatment - Remove Conifers from Aspen Clone

Wildlife Habitat Section
Montana Department Fish, Wildlife and Parks
January 2011

SIKES ACT

The Sikes Act of 1974(Public Law 92-452) is federal legislation which allows for memoranda of understanding between state fish and game and federal agencies to develop a funding source, and partner in projects, for the restoration of fish and wildlife habitat on public lands.

The program was originally conceived of as a means to implement a habitat stamp which would be required in order to recreate on federal lands. The money from the sale of the stamp would be directed back to state fish and game agencies for use on habitat restoration projects for those wildlife and fish species that are fished, hunted or trapped.

About 20 years ago, Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks developed agreements with the U.S. Forest Service and U.S. Bureau of Land Management to cost share projects on a 50:50 basis for habitat restoration and improvement on public lands. Funds available to FWP have averaged $75,000 per year.

An Advisory Committee participates in project proposal review. The Committee currently includes Chris Marchion of Anaconda Sportsmen; John Gibson of Southeastern Sportsmen and Jim Olson of the Montana Wildlife Federation.

Agency representatives are Eric Tomasik for U.S. Forest Service; Jay Parks for U.S. Bureau of Land Management, and Steve Knapp for Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks. An annual meeting is typically conducted in January or February.

The majority of proposed projects are from the U.S. Forest Service. A project must have written endorsements of the field biologist from each agency. The number of proposed projects vary from 5 to 45 in any given year. Projects funded vary from 4 to 25.

The objective of the program is habitat enhancement on public lands targeting species that are fished, hunted or trapped.
